CambridgeIVF is taking part in the campaign to raise funds and awareness during National Fertility Awareness Week which starts today and runs until Sunday. During National Fertility Awareness Week, Infertility Network UK is joining forces with the entire fertility community to make this week even bigger and better than last year.

Addenbrooke's IVF clinic Cambridge IVF is supporting the cause both by raising awareness and by raising funds. This week, the Trumpington-based clinic will be taking part in the Embryo Challenge. They will be donating £5 to Infertility Network for every embryo fertilized during the course of the week.

Cambridge IVF lead consultant Dr Alka Prakash said: "Infertility Network offers fantastic support to those struggling to conceive and we're really pleased to be supporting the charity during National Fertility Awareness Week."
